Missionary Gave Interesting Talk in Methodist Church

Dr. Charles Dyer of Armenia talked of experiences in Arabia, last Sunday evening — Explains the Mohammed religion, exposing its cruelty of the sect.

Dr. Charles Dyer of Armenia gave an interesting talk in the Methodist Church Sunday evening, on his experiences in Arabia.

Dr. Dyer's object in giving these talks is to expose the Mohammed religion. He explained the founding of Mohammedism by Mohammed in the sixth century.

Mohammed at the age of 16 years claimed to have been annointed son of God and began the Koran or Mohammed bible which was written in a cave. After its completion he picked 500 men who were trained for two years to go out and preach his doctrine. The men who refused to accept his teaching were killed and the women taken as ransom.

Up to 1478 the population was reduced from 25 millions to 4½ millions by these measures and during the six years between 1914 and 1920 1,200,000 persons were put to cruel deaths by the Turks.

He described one massacre, that of November 18, 1917, when he witnessed the slaying of 450, among whom were his father and mother, as they were attending religious services in his home city on the Euphrates and only 120 miles from the Garden of Eden. The preacher who was also the professor in the college of which Dr. Dyer was a sophomore, was asked to renounce his faith for that of Mohammed and by refusing, enraged the 75 Turkish officers, who first cut off the end of his tongue, the both ears, lower lip, one eye was gouged out by a sword and then both arms hacked off but he preferred death to Mohammedism. Likewise the congregation refused to accept this doctrine. Then they were grouped, children up to 7 years were killed, boys ranging from 7 to 14 years were taken as slaves, the men and women were shot down after singing two hymns, "In the Sweet Bye and Bye" and "There's a Land That is Fairer Than Day."

Dr. Dyer was separated from his two brothers, 7 and 9½ years old. He was placed in a dungeon, ten feet under ground for 3½ years, carrying chains that weighed 60 pounds fastened around his ankles and neck and he with the others was sentenced to execution in ten days. However, French soldiers arrived and released the men after President Woodrow Wilson appropriated 50 million dollars to the Near East Relief. 12 of the young men came to America.

Dr. Dyer's father was a graduate of Yale and Dr. Dyer had mastered six different languages when taken prisoner. Now he is educating his two brothers, John and James whom he succeeded in locating and bringing to this country.

Many other interesting facts were given by Dr. Dyer of life in Arabia. At the close of his talk he performed an Arab wedding ceremony, having the couple dressed in the Arabian costumes.

Old Bell To Ring Anew In Addison Church

Tones That Called Worshippers Together in Borden Will Bring Same Invitation to Addison Methodists.

The Old Bell that for something like forty years called the people of Borden and vicinity to worship in the Methodist Church at Borden was taken down last week and transferred to the Addison Methodist Church.

The Rev. Wesley Searles the District Superintendent for the Hornell District was instructed to dispose of the Borden Church property and offered to the members of the Addison Church the bell. This offer was accepted at the Quarterly Conference held in the Addison Church last Wednesday.

Ralph Hand, Walter Perkins, George Dininny, George Hurd and Edward Watkins composed the committee to make the transfer. Not forty-eight hours had elapsed when the industrious group of men decided to benefit Addison by the addition of this sweet toned bell to the tower of the Methodist Church. Thus the work was carried out. The bell was taken down on a very cold morning and by late afternoon of the same day it rested in the Addison Church tower.

The kind assistance of the men of the Wall Street Garage and the Wall Street coal dealer made the task of raising the bell a little easier.

It comes to our church and to Addison at a very appropiate season of the year. Christmas and the New Year for Addison we trust will be joyous, and my the sound of the Methodist Bell ringing out many cheerful tones, ring in many seasons of harmony, peace, and joy for many a long year for all.

Mr. and Mrs. Asa Smith called at the home of William Widger in Rathbone Sunday.

Addisonites Take Second League Win From Bath

The Addison High School basketball team won from Bath 18 to 17 last Friday evening on the local court. It was the second league game of the year for the Addisonites who kept their standing at 1,000 per cent. Two preliminaries were played, the Ag team beating the Music Department boys 34 to 12, and the Addison second team losing to Bath second team 12 to 7.

Although Coach Hewson's boys eked out a one point win over the county seaters, they seemed to be having an "off" night, and showed a complete reversal of the form displayed in their clean-cut victory over Painted Post. Robbins, usually the spark-plug of the outfit, came into the line-up after a two-day illness and must be commended for sticking through the game. The fact that he did not play Bath off its feet Friday is not to be wondered at, for a less gritty player would have been in bed. The entire team seemed to be having an off night, shot after shot which ordinarily would have scored, rolled off the outside of the hoop.

Defensively the team kept a fast charging Bath quintet constantly

DELMAR DARRIN SUFFERED FALL

Delmar M. Darrin was knocked unconscious by a fall on the ice Wednesday morning, but as the Advertiser goes to press is reported to be feeling better.

Mr. Darrin was going down the steps of his home on the way to his office. The sheet of ice which glazed everything out-of-doors this morning proved too treacherous and the venerable Addison barrister fell striking upon his back and his head. He was knocked senseless by the blow, but recovered consciousness before a physician arrived. Mr. Darrin, who is 84 years old, attends to the duties of his profession every day.

Diamond Jubilee Edition of Advertiser Coming Next Week

The issue of the ADVERTISER for next week will be the Diamond Jubilee number. This event has been long looked forward to by the publishers, and it is believed many of the subscribers to the paper are almost as eagerly waiting to see it.

The editors, in preparing for this seventy-fifth anniversary edition of the paper are striving for higher idels than can probably be reached. Even so, it is hoped the Jubilee edition of the Advertiser may be a paper the more loyal citizens of the village and surrounding community will wish to preserve. The editors have been fortunate enough to secure from friends of the paper a few rare old photographs which will be reproduced. Much time and effort is being spent in digging up articles of historical interest to Addison people, and these stories are taken collectively make the story of the development of Addison.

The editors have been impressed with the number of copies of a certain edition of the old Addison Republican which have been brought into this office. The chief article of news in that particular paper was the inaugertion address of President Van Buren, yet many Addison families felt it to be worth saving nearly a hundred years. This being true one is impressed with the probability quite few local citizens who pause to think about the future, will save copies of the Diamond Jubilee edition for their descendants to peruse.

Unfortunately the ordinary newsprint on which papers are printed in this generation will not stand the test of time, crumbling after a few years exposure to the air and light. For those families which desire to keep this historical edition for either their own satisfaction or for the benefit of their descendants, the publishers are printing a limited number of copies of what they are pleased to call the deluxe edition of the Jubilee number. These papers if filed away with reasonable care, can be expected to last to tell the story of Addisn as we know it today, to hose yet unborn who will be living here one hundred years from now. These will sell for the nominal sum of fifteen cents a copy to defray the added expense of the paper stock and printing.

A list of 27 members is now ready to send to Scout Executive Percy Dunn in Hornell. Work of Appraising Homes For Federal Loans Going Forward

Steuben County home owners may secure funds for paying mortgages due—Loans obtained up to 80% of appraised value of property may include back taxes and other liens if mortgagee takes bond in payment.

Carroll Remington of Hornell, who was recently appointed preliminary appraiser in Steuben County for the Federal Home Owners' Loan Corporation, was in Addison Tuesday. Mr. Remington called in the Advertiser office to acquaint people of this section with the fact that application blanks for home loans may be obtained at the First National Bank of Addison, or by sending to Mr. Remington's office at 22 Elm St., Hornell, or from the Liberty Bank Building in Buffalo. He stated that appraisals are going rapidly forward in this county.

The purpose of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation is to enable property holders to finance maturing home mortages at a time when all ordinary means of refinancing are unavailabel. The Act applies only to homes in which the owners live, not exceeding $20,000 in value, and refers to mortage abligations existing on or before June 13, 1933, the date of approval of the Act.

Loans will be made for a term of 15 years or less on an installment payment basis, and must be amoratized monthly, except under exceptional circumstances when quarterly, semi-annually or annual installments may be accepted. A home mortage under the Act means a mortage on a dwelling occupied by not more than four families, used wholey or in part by the owner. The owner may temporarily reside elswhere than on the precises.

No loan may be made in excess of $14,000. Loans up to 80% of the appraised value as determined by the H. O. L. C. may be made to take up existing mortages and other leins, and to make necessary repairs, at an interest of 5%, but only when the mortagee will accept bonds of the corporation in lieu of cash. Cash will be advanced to pay taxes, repairs, etc.

Loans up to 50% of the appraised value of the property may be obtained for payment of taxes, assesments and necessary repairs, on homes otherwise free from encumbrances. Loans up to 40% of the appraised value of the property may be obtained to pay mortgagee his claim in cash. Loans in the H. O. L. C. can not be made on farms.

CHRISTMAS

Nearly two thousand years ago there occurred an event in the history of the world, which holds greater importance to a larger number of people today, than it did in that contemporary time. Anyone can easily guess what that event was, for there has never been another single event or collection of happenings through the life of the human race which has cast a beneficent ray like the birth of Jesus in Bethlehem.

As we approach the anniversary of that event it is to be expected that more people have their minds stirred by the celebration all Christian people observe. Though it may be more in the background of the mind during the rest of the year, at the Christmas season all who feel the influence upon their lives instinctively dwell upon that scene in old Palestine, the Babe in the manger who was the Lamb of God, the Puritan mother Mary, and the group of Wise Men come from afar to bring precious gifts to the "new King" they had successfully sought by following His star in the firmament. A story of simplicity, at which some have scoffed, so why the world-wide, all-time significance?

Because, the story of that birth and the Life it gave, carries the only real hope to which people have clung down through the march of the centuries; a hope which is still able to buoy up a race that is stumbling down the darksome lane of the fourth year of world-wide depression. And besides hope of life to come, what lessons do we take to heart from the Babe of Bethlehem?

Well there are many lessons, too many to even try to enumerate in a brief essay such as this. One lesson we must not omit to mention is the lesson of self-sacrifice. The entire life of Christ was a constant picture of self-sacrifice — pushing aside all that was offered for personal glory, to carry on the real work and purpose for which He was sent into the world. Did Satan offer Him the kingdoms of the world, yet did He turn His back upon them. Earthly power and the adulation of a hero-seeking crowd were not the ends to which He shaped His life, but the Man who had upon His soul the burdens of all mankind to come, still had time to help a friend and heal with that magic touch those outcasts of society following His steps.

In this world of depression there are millions today who rely entirely on the hope that this land cannot collapse as long as people cling to the tenets of Christianity. The crying need of the world is a re-awakening of faith in all the people—faith that the promises of God bind the race as they did in the past. When the people arise from chastisement to accept the real values of life and turn from the sordid superficialities which have held first place with so many, then can we build out of the wreckage a stronger, more enduring civilization.

Already there has been far too much experimentation with artificial respiration for society, and synthetic cures for a deep seated malady. Destroying food and materials for clothing when one half of the world shivers naked and starving, is not the way Christ on earth would cure a depression. The Man who was able to feed thousands with a few loaves, would take up the surpluses of America and distribute gratis to starving human beings on the other side of the world, and those from whom the surpluses were removed would be richer than they were before.

It is not enough that a few of our people pause to think of the Birth of Christ on Christmas day. No indeed, America needs an awakening of the people to the facts staring us in the face. When we stop pinning our hopes of betterment on whiskey taxes that must eventually be paid by human misery, we will have taken a step in the right direction. But to reach the goal of good times for all, and social betterment we must adopt the self-sacrificing example of the Man of Galilee.

YOUR PROTEST COUNTS

By Wright A. Patterson

"Sec. 9. (a) An advertisement of a food, drug or cosmetic shall be deemed to be false if IN ANY PARTICULAR it is untrue, or by AMBIGUITY OR INFERENCE CREATES A MISLEADING IMPRESSION regarding such food, drug or cosmetic."

That section 9 (a), quoted above, of the Tugwell bill is another of the many dangerous provisions which it is proposed to foist, not only on the manufacturer of foods, drugs and cosmetics, but also upon every merchant who sells any food, drug or cosmetic product as is shown by section 17 (e) of the same bill, and publishers are also threatened with fine and imprisonment, or both, by a legal interpretation of section 17 (d).

A grocer advertises Quaker Oats at "a delectable, appetizing, nourishing" breakfast food, and the secretary of agriculture, or some one he may designate to act for him, does not agree with the grocer that Quaker Oats is "delectable, appetizing or nourishing", he says such advertising is misleading and the merchant, without an opportunity to defend himself in court, without that American right of being considered innocent until proven guilty before a jury, is hustled off to jail for as much as a year, or fined as much as $1,000 or both.

Probably Professor Tugwell, who sponsors senate bill 1944, does not expect to go to any such extremes, but the provisions of the bill make just such extremes possible. If passed the bill would become a law on the statute books of the United States, to be interpreted not only by those in the Agricultural department of the present administration, but by those of succeeding administrations as well.

The Third Internationale at Moscow, or the governing body of Soviet Russia, could form no more drastic or dangerous distatorial rule or law, and America is not yet another Soviet republic.

Under such a law no merchant selling any food drug or cosmetic product could be expected to take a chance on advertising. They would become the prey of every jealous or envious competitor, of every individual harboring a grudge. Under such a law your newspaper would lose the advertising patronage of every grocer, butcher, baker, candy merchant, druggist, or any other dealer in foods, drugs and cosmetics. The result for the newspapers of America would be almost certain annihilation.

Such a drastic law is proposed in order to reach the small percentage of fakes now being offered in the food, drug and cosmetic lines. All of these can be stopped under present laws by an appeal to the courts, but the process might be simplified so as to enable the Agricultural department to more easily utilize the facilities of the courts against the manufacture of these fakes. A use of the courts is suggested, not the creation of a Soviet dictator.—Extract from editorial in Publishers Auxiliary.

WASTE MAKES WANT

Two schools of thought have been working in the Agriculture Department of the present administration. The one led by Secretary Wallace and motivated by such Braintrusters as Prof. Tugwell, clings to the idea that the proper way to restore prosperity to the farmers is by limiting production and destroying surpluses. The other school of thought best exemplified by Mr. Peek, is firmly convinced that destroying property cannot create wealth and the best way to make agricultural prices rise is by developing foreign outlets for products of the farm.

Secretary Wallace has had his wish gratified and now Mr. Peek has been removed from the Department of Agriculture and placed at the head of a new committee to negotiate for greater export privileges for U. S. products.

May it be said to Mr. Peek's credit, that he has had actual business experience in places of great trust and has acquitted himself admirably. The strife between Mr. Peek and Prof. Tugwell has been that of common-sense, business logic opposed by the theories of a boy professor who is a near-socialist. On the one side is the narrow viewpoint of one on whom the weight of years rests too lightly for mature wisdom; on the other a conception of wider horizons and the idea of real progress instead of stilted control.

In a recent address, that noble social worker and all-truist, Jane Addams, spoke of the breakdown of the World Economic Conference held last spring. She told of the surplus of wheat in the major producing countries of the world and their attempt to limit the amount put on the world markets. "At the same time", said Miss Addams, "there were millions of wheat eating people in the north of china, starving for food. Ships were tied to wharfs for lack of cargoes, and men idle to man them. Would it not be better for the world to work out some understanding to use these surpluses of grain for food, instead of telling the farmers they must cast aside their habits of thrift, plow up grain and limit production?"

Professors may compound wise sounding theories, but when they attempt to dictate to those who toil in the fields how much they shall raise of this and of that, they are tinkering with the very laws of Nature. The progress of the human race has been founded on the principle of thrift. Can any people during the hysteria of a depression, in search for panaceas of the moment, succeed in throwing overboard this principle and install in its place the theory of waste, extravagance and indolence?

When the history of this time is finally written by sober minds, it will be revealed that many experiments were tried by groping hands endeavoring to substitute theories for the old, tried and true principles. The farther we wander on some of these uncharted roads, the longer it will be back to the sound highway.

Waste will always make want.

The growing complexity of the money problem found its echo lately in the resignation of two high government officials.

The subject of monetary standards is very likely to be the hottest of subjects when Congress convenes. And, unless the public pulse changes its beat materially, the bulk of sentiment will be in favor of a reasonably conservative stand. Most businesses and individuals believe that gold should remain the backbone of the system.

FLIGHTS FROM THE BIRDHOUSE

By Rev. J. V. AXTELL

Little Yon

John Ericsson was a tall, angular Norwegian who came to the Adirondacks and built his lumber camp in the center of a tract of virgin forest that had been marked out for him where he had contracted to cut the logs and deliver them alongside the tracks of the lumber company's log railroad.

The camp was a well built house of logs with a kitchen, dining room and bedroom on the first floor, and the bunk room on the second floor with an outside stairway leading up to it. In addition to the living quarters there was a stable for the horses and a smaller building which served as a shop where axes were ground, saws filed and sleighs and harnesses repaired. All these buildings of course were built of logs.

After John and his fellow-countrymen had the buildings finished, he went out of the woods and fetched back with him his wife and three year old son, John Jr. If Mrs. Ericsson had not been so busy planning the meals for the twenty healthy woodsmen, keeping the place tidy, and caring for "Little Yon," as the baby was affectionately called, she would have been very lonely indeed; for she was the only women within a radius of five miles, and the dense, uncut forest stretched for miles in all directions.

The Ericssons seemed to be happy enough, notwithstanding all the hard work that must be done, and the absence of all the lines of entertainment we of the towns enjoy; no visitors, no mail nor papers except on Thursdays when the log train brought in provisions which had to be hauled to camp over a mile of tote road. The husky lumbermen were very thoughtful and brought the water from the spring and kept the woodpile replenished for the cook stove and heaters in the dining room and bunk room, and did a hundred and one odd jobs to lighten Mrs. Ericsson's work.

Little Yon, of course was the ever present sunbeam and center of attraction for the whole camp. The men—some of them having children of their own—would whittle out jumping-jacks and other crude toys from wood, bring him live red squirrels and chipmunks, blow up the bladder cysts of the deer they killed for toy balloons. Sometimes one of them would lift him upon the broad back of one of the big draft horses, cautioning him to hold on tight to the hames so he would not fall off, and let him ride from the watertrough to the stable. Sometimes when the weather was fine Mrs. Ericsson would wrap him up and he would ride down with the teamster to the railroad track for the provisions. And sometimes after supper one of the men would go down and bring him up to the bunk room when the men would give him pig-a-back rides and have all sorts of fun with him. So everything was going splendidly in Camp Ericsson. The sound of the axes and saws, the crash of the big trees the men felled, the skidders talk to the intelligent horses, the dull thud of the peavey as it was driven on to the log could be heard all day; while the log piles along the railroad track grew higher and higher day by day.

But there came a day in February when the snow was four feet deep on the level that one of the men became sick with a sore throat. The doctor was sent for and he pronounced it diphtheria, ordered a bunk to be made in the shop where the man was quarantined, and serum was sent for to the nearest hospital seventy-five miles away. In spite of this precaution Little Yon caught the disease. The doctor did his best and while the man recovered, Little Yon could not be saved.

Now the Ericssons were descendants of the heroic Norsemen and they decided to place Little Yon's body in a temporary grave near the camp and when the logging job was completed carry it with them to its final resting place. So they sent to the lumber village for the minister to come and conduct a brief service. When the minister arrived at the camp he discovered the best evidence of tender sympathy dwelling in big brawny men he had ever seen. A wide path had been shoveled through the deep snow from the camp to a knoll that could be seen from the front door; and there under a medium sized spruce tree a little grave had been dug. One of the men had tramped ten miles to buy cheesecloth to line the grave walls, and the pile of earth by the grave side had been completely hidden by dark green spruce boughs. The doctor, who accompanied the minister had cautioned him that he was not to go into the camp house, so at the door John Ericsson came and handed the minister his own New Testament and said, "Please read Mark 10:13-16 and talk to us about it." You young folks know the passage that tells about the disciples discouraging mothers who brought their children to Jesus to be blessed by him, and how he said, "Permit them to come, for of such is the kingdom of heaven. And he took them up in his arms and blessed them." At this time four of the men came through the door bearing the casket; the minister going before, the parents following, and after them the big Norwegian lumbermen, two by two, with bowed heads; and together they all walked slowly through the snow tunnel, shoulder high, to the knoll and under the spruce tree. The casket was lowered by means of reins from the harness, and all stood with uncovered heads while the minister read the Scriptures, prayed, and talked about Mark 10:13-16. Especially did he emphasize that Jesus took the children in his arms and blessed them. Then he told about that disciple who best knew that Jesus loved him and leaned his head on Jesus' bosom, and his name was John. And would not that same Son of God who took children in his arms and blessed them be specially tender to Little John for the big John's sake? Then they all turned from the knoll and marched back to the camp and the door closed behind the stricken parents, and the lumbermen climbed the stairs to the bunk room and closed that door also, and the sick man quartered in the shop looked out of the window through tear-filled eyes at the man shoveling the earth back into the grave.

Several weeks passed and one day the minister saw John Ericsson on the street of the lumber village and asked how it was going with him. "It is so lonsesome, so lonesome at de camp! When Little Yon was with us, he modder and me we sit by de fire at night wid Little Yon on her lap. She would put her apron ober Little Yon's face and I vould say, 'O Phere Little Yon?' And den he vould reach ub a liddle hand and pull de apron avay and I vould point my fingure ad him and say, 'O He right dar'. Den de men up in de bunk room could hear Liddle Yon's laugh. But now when we sit by de fire dar an't no Liddle Yon and I feel the tear comin' and I don't want the modder to see, sa take de vasser bucket and go to de spring. When I get out in de clear night den de old question come,—and dar is no play now—"O Phere Little Yon". Den I 'member phat you say about Yon in Yesus' bosom and I look up at the stars and da twinkle youst like Liddle Yon's eyes and I point at the heaven and say, "O He right dar!"

Rumors Persist of Break Between President and Postmaster Farley

Albany, Dec. 19 — Rumors of a coolness and impending break between President Roosevelt and State Chairman-National Chairman-Postmaster General James A. Farley just will not down. They are so definite as to indicate that Mr. Farley may have to choose soon just which of his titles he will give up. It is quite well known that Mr. Farley has given little or no attention to his $15,000 job of running the postoffices of the country, and has left to his subordinates the task of getting Republicans out and Democrats in, which they have performed in decidedly crude fashion in many instances. As a matter of fact, up to the time of starting on his European trip Mr. Farley had devoted his chief attention to just two things —traveling over the country in the interest of prohibition repeal in order that he might grasp credit therefor, though it was equally assured if he had stayed at home, and trying to elect Democrats to office in New York State.

The P. M. G. Elected Scapegoat

Rumor's finger points to the outcome of the latter as the chief cause of the rift with the President, particularly Mr. Farley's attempt to make Joseph V. McKee Mayor of New York. Had he succeeded, there would have been great praise. But he failed quite dismally, and certainly considerable discredit was cast on the Administration by the bold attempt to tie it up with the McKee candidacy, for which Mr. Farley cannot disclaim responsibility. Many wonder just how far Mr. Farley, in his enthusiasm may have misled the President as to what he was going to accomplish in his home state. At any rate this, like all similar occasions, calls for a scapegoat, and Mr. Farley seems to have unanimously elected himself to the job by promising much more than he was able to perform.

First Amendment to Be Repealed

When, on the evening of December 5, at 5:32 o'clock, a state convention at Salt Lake City ratified repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, it not only marked the end of prohibition as a federal law in this country, but it also marked the first occasion on which a section of the Federal Constitution was repealed outright. All other amendments either modified or added to previous sections. The Enghteenth Amendment established prohibition. The Twenty-first Amendment, which Utah was the thirty-sixth state to ratify, repeals the Eighteenth in the usual form and in addition provides that, "The transportation or importation into any state, territory or possession of the United States for delivery or use therein of intoxicating liquors, in violation of the laws thereof, is hereby prohibited."

Ten Towns Voted Dry

At the recent election ten townships in this state, operating under the local option feature of the Alcoholic Control Law, voted not to permit the sale of liquor. Twelve others voted on the question, ten of them going wet and two permitting legal sale under certain restrictions. A number of other towns will remain dry because no one has asked permission to sell liquor therein. Under a ruling of the Attorney General all towns that have not voted dry are considered wet and will participate in the distribution of the taxes from the sale of liquor. Towns which vote dry may not participate in such revenues.

Milk Control Board Pays Its Way

Evidently the Milk Control Board is going to be one of the few divisions of the State government which pays its way. When it was established the Legislature appropriated $90,000 for its maintenance. Later $75,000 was added, of which $35,000 was set aside for a thorough investigation of distribution costs and profits by Dr. Leland Spencer of Cornell University. Of this available total of $165,000, the board has reimbursed the state for all but $25,000 out of money collected by it as fees, fines and penalties imposed on dealers for violation of orders. In the seven months of the board's administration New York dairymen have received $11,712,600 more for milk than in the same period in 1932. As a result of a preliminary report of the Spencer committee an increase of one cent a quart has been granted in the retail price of milk, making the minimum price 11 cents in all up-State cities and villages.

Mystery of Racing Bill's Death

One of the mysteries of the last regular session of the Legislature was the fate of the Wallace bill which would have permitted betting at race tracks and would have given the state eight per cent of the gross income from trotting, running or steeple chase meets, estimated at about a quarter of a million a year. There appeared to be no opposition, the Governor was said to be ready to sign the bill, and when the Senate failed to pass it after it had got through the Assembly everybody on the hill just gasped. An X-ray of the workings by which the result was attained would be interesting. It would also tell which of a great many rumors are correct.

Sport Bill Again Seek Relief

At any rate the lawmakers are certain to have another try at it. Practically every racing association in the state showed a loss last year, Belmont track in Nassau County heading the list with $200,000, followed by talk of closing. Promoters of the "Sport of Kings" argue that there is always unregulated "oral" betting anyhow, and that strict regulation with a share of the income going to help out the state coffers would be a benefit all around and no more costly to those who follow the ponies. Within the past year eight states have adopted the pari-mutual system. In New Jersey there is local option on the question and last election 11 counties acted favorably. New York sportsmen talk of building tracks over there if the Legislature of this state again fails to legalize betting.

Christmas Seal Sale Still Going Full Blast in Steuben

When it comes to "sticking" the largest Christmas seal in town, the honor goes to the General Advertising Company's "brush" and "paste" men. The large posters are on ten large billboards in Steuben County through the courtesy of the Thomas Poster Advertising Co., Inc., of Bath New York, This donation was paid for by Mr. Robert C. Turnbull of Bath, New York, the Andrews Advertising Co., of Olean, New York, the Wilcox Poster Advertising Co., of Cohocton, New York, and the General Outdoor Advertising Co., of Binghamton, New York, who have donated the use of their large billboards throughout the County on which 24 sheet posters picturing the Christmas Seal are being displayed. These billboards which have been dressed up with these attractive posters carry an appeal to buy Christmas Seals to aid in the prevention work of tuberculosis and maintain the Steuben County Home for undernourished children.

The first sheet of seals sold by the Steuben County Tuberculosis Association was bought by Mrs. Margaret Standish, Public Health Nurse, and the second sheet of seals was bought by Miss Bertha L. Reynolds, Public Health Nurse. Coming in constant touch with tuberculosis, these two nurses realize that every seal sold means better health for our children.

The Executives of the Steuben County Tuberculosis Association know that every sheet of seals sold brings care and cure to stricken ones. Sherman H. Crane, President, bought the third sheet of seals; Charles Wineburg, Vice-President, bought the fourth sheet of seals; Judge Edwin S. Brown, Member of the Eexecutive Committee, purchased the fifth sheet of seals; Miss Whitney, unrse at the Summer Camp purchased the sixth sheet of seals and Miss Hazel Stewart, Member of the Executive Committee, purchased the seventh sheet of seals.

Emmaus Shrine No. 17, W. S. of J., located at Hornell, N. Y., heads the list of organizations as the first purchaser of a Health Bond, auxiliary to the Christmas Seal, and under the Better Homes and Gardens, Garden Club of Haskinsville purchased the second Health Bond This Club has given aid and support to the Summer Camp for several years. Bonds have been mailed to organizations throughout the County, and a large response is hoped for.

The Christmas shopping is nearly finished — but until you have bought Christmas Seals you have not fulfilled your full obligation of social citizenship. The sale of Christmas Seals and Health Bonds is the only means the Association has of carrying on it's work. The Seals are one dollar a sheet or one cent each. Perhaps, everyone can not buy a full sheet, but if each person would buy a few seals, it would help greatly in completing the quota. Buy Christmas Seals.

Dog Bites Boy

Sunday while visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Scott of Troups Creek, Gerald Marlatt, age 3½ years, was bitten by Mr. Scott's shepherd dog. Both were in the house and the dog being jealous of children, as it had never been around them, suddenly jumped and grabbed into Gerald's left cheek tearing so large a hole Dr. Clark of Knoxville took three stitches to draw it together. The dog has never been ugly or mean in any way but is jealous of children. Both Mr. and Mrs. Scott felt badly about the accident but it was not their fault. Dr. Clark said the lad would get along nicely if given proper care. He did not think much of a scar would be left.

Republican Senator To Introduce Bill For County Gov. Reform

State Senator Thomas C. Desmond, Orange County Republican, has announced the principal features of the program for county and township governmental reform which he will present at the January session of the Legislature.

"Our bills will provide," said he, "that any New York State county or township which so desires be freely allowed to continue its present form of government. The newly suggested forms of county government will be entirely optional In some New York Sate counties the present forms of government are undoubtedly working out satisfactorily and therein should be let alone. Our new bills, with accompaying constitutional amendment, will permit, however, at least ten different and modern optional forms of county and township government, the principal variations of which are: (1) The County Manager form; (2) The County President form; (3) The County Executive form; (4) The County Commission form."

Senator Desmond said that the experts of the National Municipal League and others who were assisting him were not yet through with the final drafting of the bills. He was certain, however, that the bills would surely be ready for introduction in the Legislature early in January, as part of a joint bipartisan legislative program which it is hoped will also include New York City charter revision.

"Optional methods in our bills of electing county and township officers," he continued, "will include the existing party system of nominations and elections, a new system of elimination primaries without party designation, and a new proportional representation system of preferential voting.

"It is provided in the bills that initiation of changes in the form of government in any county may come either by resolution of the present Board of Supervisors or by petition signed by voters of the county equal in number to at least five percent of the whole number of votes cast in the county for governor at the last gubernatorial election. A majority referendum vote of all the voters in any county, at a special election, will be required to make the proposed changes effective."

At the last regular session of the Legislature Senator Desmond sponsored New York City charter revision measures which failed of passage by one vote. He hopes to win this year both Democratic and Republican support for a bipartisan legislative program of complete reform of local government, including rural counties as well as New York City.

WHY SUCH

ESHELMAN

SUCCESS?

There is one basic fact, equally true of a feed manufacturer, a feed dealer or a farmer. There is just one reason why a customer will step up to a counter or desk and part with his money—only because what he receives is worth more to him than the money he pays for it. And specifically there can be only one way it can be worth more—by creating more money for him than the sum represented by the price he paid.

Therein is the whole story of successful business. There is the common sense reason for ESHELMAN policy, which is to consider the customer's need before its own profit—the necessity of quality rather than price—the necessity of selling results rather than so many pounds of this or that.

Discriminating farmers know and appreciate the value and the dependability of this ESHELMAN policy. Our constantly increasing number of new customers testifies to the certainty of this conclusion.

Bureau Head Says "Raise Proteins"

William Stempfle, Steuben County Farm Bureau head has sent a letter to members of the bureau pointing out the advisability of raising crops next year which are heavy in protein. The letter follows:

To My Friends

The Dairymen of Steuben County:

The head of a large feed company made a public statement to the effect that we are faced with a shortage of food crops, especially of protein.

That ingredient is therefore due for a price rise. This situation, it appears, is what we face for the next few years.

That being the case, it will be to the advantage of every dairyman to grow as much protein as possible. And that can best be done in Steuben County by growing legume hay and increasing the protein content of the pasture grasses.

As a means of preparing against the increased cost of feed, the following schedule of meetings was held to discuss ways of preparation.

Tuesday, December 12, afternoon Bath Town Hall, evening, Wheeler Town Hall.

Wednesday, December 12, afternoon Avoca Grange Hall, evening, Cameron Town Hall.

Thursday, December 14, afternoon, Canisteo Grange Hall, evening Jasper Grange Hall.

Friday, December 15, afternoon Addison Grange Hall, evening Pershо Church.

To attend one of these meetings may help to save considerable on the food bill in the next few years. You and the neighbors are cordially invited to join with us in this discussion.

Sincererly,
Wm. Stempfle
County Agricultural Agent

Jasper Central High School Wins Game From Woodhull

The Woodhull High basketball team proved itself a sportsmanlike team when it lost to Jasper Central School 24-15. The game was a rough affair which can be blamed to the traditional rivalry that has existed between the two places for years.

The first three quarters were anybody's game until in the fourth quarter Woodhull surged ahead. It looked like Jasper's defeat but they showed that they still had something left by nosing Woodhull out of their 15-12 lead by changing the score 24-15 in Jasper's favor.

Waight and J. E. Schenck took the honors for Jasper with six points each, while Hallett copped the honors for Woodhull.

Bath Second Team Beat A. H. S. Reserves

In an exceptionally slow game last Friday evening, the Bath second team defeated the Addison High reserves 12 to 7. The Bath second team averaged bigger players than the varsity, but as far as playing ability was concerned the local reserves held possession of the ball most of the time.

The great trouble with Coach Hewson's youngsters was their inability to locate the basket with the multitude of shots aimed at it. They failed to score until about the last minute of the first quarter while Bath took advantage of the openings to make 8 points. Although playing below their customary form the locals outscored their opponents in the last half.

Lindsley, the fast little forward of the second team had the best luck locating the basket, making five of his team's points. The other basket was made by Bergin who jumped center. Lent, the Bath right guard, was high scorer for the visitors, making five points on two field goals and a foul.

He had been sick for a number of years, only last Sunday he returned from East Aurora where he has been under a doctor's care. Addisonites Take Second League Win From Haverling puzzled with every attempt to score, the visitors being fortunate in their percentage of shots to make as many baskets as they did. But offensively the Addisonites were not clicking, and must be considered lucky to have won on an off night. Man to man and as a team they seemed to be twenty points better than Bath, and as long as the game is in the bag the outfit has simply passed a bad hole along the way and should be expected to rise to new heights in the remaining contests of the schedule.

Bath scored the first point of the game on a foul shot tossed by Haley their colored player. Hickey missed a shot after he was fouled, and although the Addison boys bombarded the basket it appeared they never would break the ice for a score, until Joe Hopper registered a clean toss from beyond the Bath defensive line. Robbins missed two free shots when he was fouled, but Wilson broke through with a field basket to bring the score 4 to 1 at the end of the quarter.

In the second quarter Addison woke up to score 10 points, Bath doing nearly as well making 9. Hovey went in for Flynn in this period. Robbins made one point on a foul shot, but Bath made two baskets in succession to tie the score, the second being a long steve from mid-court. Robbins did not leave it that way for long, putting his mates ahead with a pretty field goal. Hovey missed a foul shot. Robbins tossed one in as he was fouled but the referee disallowed the basket, and the Addison pivot man made one out of two tries. A moment later he was fouled again while shooting, and made both attempts good. Hovey came through with a nice basket. Bath missed a foul, Hickey leaving the game, while Hargrave came in. Bath got two baskets in rapid order and missed a foul shot. Hargrave tossed a field basket. Hovey lost one he threw as he was being fouled and missed his try as the half ended 14 to 10 in favor of the home boys.

The third quarter was slow. Bath made one point out of two free throws and a field basket to come within one point of tying. In the last frame Hickey coming back in missed a free toss, but Hovey registered one from the same place. After Bath missed a try from the free throw line Wilson made the star play of the evening. On a dead run away from the basket while eluding his guard, Bill leaped high in the air, turned and tossed for as pretty a scoring play as was ever seen on any court. Bath made another field goal and scored 1 point out of four foul shots. Robbins made good another single pointer and Bath made the final point of the game in the same way. Bath had the ball in the final minutes, but the Addison players were too smart to let them get set for a lucky shot before the gun went off

Farmers Too Strong For Music Department

After being held to a two-point lead at the end of the first half the A. H. S. Aggies came back strong in the last period to trim the Music Department five 32 to 12. The horn tooters went strong during the early part of the game, but they have only been practicing a short time and their lack of condition was evident later in the game, as they failed to score in the last two periods.

Heidrick was high scorer for the Ags, tossing in 9 field baskets and 3 fouls for a total of 21 points. In fact if the Music Masters could have cast a spell over Heidrick, or caused him to get lost on the way to the game they might have won by a single point margin. Hallett who has been going strong for the Ags most of the season, only got one basket. Beers made 3 and Crane a basket and a foul.

Brewster and Allen were the high scorers for the Music Masters, the former getting two field goals and the latter a field basket and a couple of gratis shots he registered perfectly. Brown and Taylor with a basket apiece completed the scoring efforts of Director - Coach Burt's charges. The band boys are not at all discouraged by the result of the first game, and were heard to loudly proclaim they would beat the farmers yet, when they have more practice. The result of the game was a surprise in one way, for it was supposed the Music Masters were strong on "wind" and would outplay their opponents in the latter part of the game.

Poultry Outlook Less Favorable

As Compared to Past Three Years—Profitable Long-time Farm Enterprise for New York, Records Show.

Poultry has in the past paid relatively well on New York farms and probably will continue to do so over a period of years," writes F. A. Harper in the New York state 1934 agricultural outlook.

During the past eighteen years he points out, the poultry enterprise has returned an average of fifty-one cents an hour for time spent on it by cost-account farmers in New York state, and in only three years during that period has it failed to return them at least thirty cents an hour.

Among the factors to be considered within the poultry for 1934, however, more are unfavorable than favorable, Dr. Harper says. "Feed prices" he says, "will probably be higher in relation to egg prices than has been the case for the past three relatively favorable years. Also, the number of hens and pullets is greater than that of a year ago, with a larger than usual proportion of pullets."

A free copy of the agricultural outlook, in which the business future of the various types of farming is forecast, may be obtained from the New York state college of agriculture, at Ithaca. Ask the publication office at the college for E-277.

Around Our House

Sweet But Safe

There are sweets that make you happy; there are sweets that make you blue,—with tummy-aches. And that's a sad end to any Christmas celebration, says the New York state college of home economics, which suggests that the happy and healthful kind may be furnished. If sweets are given sensibly after meals, freedom from stomach aches can be assured to the children.

The best sweet for children does not take away the appetite for other foods. Fruits, such as apples and oranges actually stimulate the appetite. But when candy is desired, the demand may be supplied by dates, prunes or figs, stuffed with marshmallow strips and rolled in granulated sugar. These make a candy which is satisfying as well as wholesome. The dried prunes and figs should be soaked until soft before stuffing, and then filled until they are plump and natural in shape.

Parisian sweets are equally good to eat, and just as good for the child. Figs, dates and raisins should be washed, the dates stoned, and all three together put through a food grinder. They should be mixed well before shaping, and may be rolled in powdered sugar afterwards. Sometimes it is more convenient to shape the whole mass in a long roll, slice it, and roll the slices in the sugar.

Candied apples, popcorn balls and such fruit candies as Turkish delight are also recommended for children. Whatever the form of the sweet, however, it should be eaten only after meals.

Feed Legume Hay Keep Hogs Thrifty

Best Substitute for Sunshine During Winter, Says Professor Morrison.

"The best way to preserve summer sunshine for winter pigs, or to duplicate good pasture conditions, is to feed the pigs a small proportion of legume hay throughout the winter", says B. F. Morrison of the New York state college of agriculture.

Professor Morrison points out that well-cured legume hay has many of the qualities of good pasture, such as high protein, mineral and vitamin content, and adds that recent experiments at the Cornell University experiment station and at other experiment stations have proved that the "winter feeding of legume hay is one of the best means of keeping pigs thrifty."

For young growing pigs, he recommends feeding the legume hay in three-part mixtures, which has been tested in numerous swine-feeding experiments. The mixture contains: 50 pounds of tankage or meat meal, 25 pounds of chopped or ground legume hay and 25 pounds of linseed meal.

Legume hay chaff, which falls to the floor around the hay mow, may be used instead of the chopped hay, he says. Clover or soybean hay may be substituted for the alfalfa hay, and fish meal is as satisfactory or even better than the tankago. Also, cottonseed meal may be used in place of the linseed meal.

This protein-rich mixture may be self-fed in one compartment of the self-feeder, he says, and shelled or ground corn or hominy feed, in another compartment. The pigs will then take just about enough of the supplement to balance their rations.

If grains of higher protein content—such as oats, wheat, or barley—are fed, the pigs are likely to eat more of the legume supplement than is needed, if it is self-fed he says. therefore, when these grains are used, it is better to mix a definite amount of the trio mixture with the ground grain.

Brood sows also need legume hay during the winter, Professor Morrison says. He states that at least ten to fifteen per cent of the sows' total winter feed should consist of good legume hay. Alfalfa, clover or soybean hay may be fed. The sows will usually eat enough alfalfa hay if it is fed in a rack. However, they do not like clover hay as well, and if it is fed it should perhaps be ground and combined with the grain mixture.

"Let the pigs run out of doors in the sunshine during good weather", he advises.

WORK HORSES NEEDED

The raising of work horses for sale should prove profitable to the general farmer who is a good judge of horses and understands their care and management, says M. W. Harper of the New York state college of agriculture.

Professor Harper points out that the farmer who has a good location for horse raising should raise colts for replacement purposes, as he can sell each year the working animals that are from five to seven years of age. Eastern farmers, he says, prefer horses weighing 1300 to 1500 pounds. The number demanded varies from year to year, but the type remains much the same. The type most farmers are looking for, he explains, is an undersized draft horse, with good feet and legs, well set, and with excellent quality and good action.

During the first ten months of 1933, Professor Harper says, receipts of horses and mules at public markets increased about twenty-eight per cent, compared with receipts during the same period in 1932. He adds that there has been an increasing inquiry for farm work horses since late summer.

How What and Why?

This paper has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State colleges of agriculture and home economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Indian Lore

Miss T. M. writes, "The pupils in my rural school have enjoyed very much the stories in Dr. Bates' "Tell Me an Indian Story" series which has been appearing in the local paper. Can these stories be obtained in book form? Also, can you suggest other books on Indians and Indian life for a children's library?"

Professor Bristow Adams replies: "Many of Dr. Bates' stories, or Indian legends, which he wrote originally for his small son, Jonathan, have been collected and printed privately, and a few copies of the book are available through the Cortland Democrat Press, Cortland, New York.

"Dr. Bates, who is adviser of Indian extension at Cornell University, suggests the following books on Indians for boys and girls.

For children six to ten years of age:

Indian Nights (legend), G. Waldo Browne. Noble and Noble, New York City.

Indian Legends, Johanna R. M. Lyback, Lyons and Carnahan.

Honne, the Spirit of Chehalis, Katherine Van Winkle Palmer (Mrs. E. Lawrence Palmer). Illustrated by Professor W. C. Baker of Cornell University.

For older boys and girls:

Indian Boyhood, by Charles A. Eastman. The autobiography of a full-blood Sioux. Little Brown & Co.

Indian Heroes and Great Chieftains, Charles A. Eastman Little Brown & Co.

Indian History for Young Folks, F. S. Drake. Harper's.

Tales of the Western Indian:

Rocky Mountain Tipi Tales, Hal G. Borland. Doubleday, Page & Co.

Blackfood Lodge Tales, George B. Grinnell. Scribner's.

Sinopah, the Indian Boy, James Willard Schultz. Schultz is an artist who has lived with the Indians for years and has written many books about them. Houghton, Mifflin Co.

Tales of Indians of the Southwest:

Pueblo Indian Folk Stories, Chas. F. Lummis. Scribner's.

Kwahu, the Hopi Boy. American Book Company.

Docas, the Indian Boy of Santa Clara. D. C. Heath & Co.

Indian Handicraft:

How to make baskets, Mary White. Doubleday, Page & Co.

Indian How Book, A. C. Parker. Doran & Co.

The Book of Indian Crafts and Indian Lore, J. H. Salomon. Harper's. The two last-named books give instructions for making beadwork, headdresses and other articles.

Form New Agency For Farm Loans

Funds Soon Available From Intermediate Credit Banks Through Local Credit Associations.

Funds from the Federal intermediate credit banks will soon be made available to farmers, for short-time loans, through local agencies known as production credit associations, says M. C. Bond of the New York state college of agriculture. Ten or more farmers, eligible for loans, may make application for an association to the production credit corporation at Springfield, Massachusetts.

To establish his eligibility for loans from a production credit corporation, a farmer needs a farm inventory and credit statement, Professor Bond says. He suggests that farm inventory week, January 1 to 6, is a good time for taking the inventory. Inventory books prepared by the New York state college of agriculture may be obtained from the local county agricultural agent or the local bank.

Professor Bond adds that the various Federal loaning agencies are being consolidated under one head. Seed and crop production loans that were available last year through the United States department of agriculture will probable not be available in 1934, he says. Also, the regional agricultural credit corporation will probably stop making loans in the near future.

TELL ME AN INDIAN STORY

Dr. E. A. Bates Cornell
(Copyright, 1932)

Winter Berries

The children sat close to the old story-teller, for soon she was to take her walking stick and travel over the western hill to another land.

Fitful shadows fell upon the wall of the bark lodge as the final blue flames came from the log that grew grayer in the fire. In her hand, the story-teller held a twig upon which hung bright red berries.

"Long moons ago", she began her tale, "the birds and the bees had a council fire in the deep woods under a red summer moon. The councilors knew they would soon be gone from the sight of man and asked who would brighten his eyes when the cold wind blows and the winter snows block the trail.

"A little flower grew beside the council fire and wished that she might blossom all winter to bring happiness to the red children; but alas, the only season for her blooming was during the time of the warm summer sun.

"An old black bear came along and heard the birds and the bees in council. He said to himself, 'Would that I could dance all winter. But since I dance three seasons of the year, I must have my sleep in the big tree and rest during the long winter.'

"The shrubs, too, heard the regrets of the flower and the bear. So, because they felt sorry for the lack of color during the long winter moons, they decided to do what they could for help. They decided that they would save their energy by having small and simple flowers, so that when late summer came, they would have plenty of energy and color left. Hence, the shrubs which the red man passed without notice in the summer moons, ever after hung clusters of red, and yellow and blue berries on their boughs to cheer the red children when the long winter moon shone on the snow covered trails."

INTEREST IN DRAINAGE

Despite low prices of farm products, high taxes, overdue mortgages, repairs to farm machinery, and many other items, farmers continue to show interest in field drainage problems, says Professor B. B. Robb of the department of rural engineering at the New York state college of agriculture.

Farmers are making efforts to get rid of wet spots in their fields. By so doing they save sometimes a half day which would otherwise be given to get the tractor out of a mud hole. Tiles laid about two feet below the surface, says Professor Robb will carry off the water which makes these huge mud puddles and takes the land out of cultivation.

Milk and Dairy Products Lead Economy and Health Foods

In Times of Rising Prices The Wise Housewife Will Use More Milk Products, Says Commissioner Baldwin

By CHARLES H. BALDWIN
Commissioner, Department of Agriculture and Markets Albany, New York

FOR many families the problem of an adequate diet within limited resources is an ever present anxiety. It is possible, fortunately, to select inexpensive, nourishing foods, and make simple appetizing meals to meet the requirements of families with depleted incomes.

As the prices of other foods rise, it tends to make milk and dairy products more economically advantageous, because milk prices are relatively stable and because of the superiority of milk as an all round food for both children and adults. Milk contains the greatest assortment of necessary nutriments of any single food material. It is the foundation upon which an adequate diet can most safely and easily be built. Milk is always a bargain, for it gives the most for the money in genuine value.

An egg a day is good, but in an economy diet this may be reduced to three or four a week, for the children. If the egg supply is limited, the children should be considered first.

Whole Grain Cereals

Meat should be served not more than once a day, or even three or four times a week. The least expensive cuts should be bought and cooked slowly and thoroughly—they have just as high food value as the high priced cuts, and if cooked properly are tasty and attractive.

Where it is possible the cereals and bread should be of whole grain. Baker's bread of whole wheat costs more than that made from white flour, but it provides food values not contained in white bread. If white bread only is used, however, there must be provided a larger proportion of vegetables and fruits.

"Enriched" Foods

Vegetables come next to milk in importance, with potatoes first. For the second daily vegetable, one of the leafy green or yellow ones should be chosen as often as possible. Canned vegetables are almost as good and sometimes cheaper than fresh. Some raw vegetables should be served at least three or four times a week, preferably when you do not serve tomatoes.

The College of Home Economics at Cornell University has something new to offer. During the past year its experts have built up two economical and highly nutritious "enriched" foods, designed to meet economical emergency. They are called Milkorno and Milkwheato, and there is a third in process of perfection which will probably be called Milkoato. The first is a mixture of yellow corn, enriched with skim milk powder and seasoned with salt; the second follows the same formula, using whole wheat instead of corn; and the third will have oats as a basis. These are to be used for porridge, muffins, desserts and cookies, as well as in combination with meat and cheese, designed for the main dish of a meal. The college experts have worked out recipes that may be used with these products. So are the state food laboratories turned to practical aid in times of economic stress.

The brilliant red color of maple and sumac leaves in autumn is due to the presence of the pigment, anthocyanin. This pigment is formed when certain food substances in the leaves are subjected to several days of strong sunlight. Therefore the coloring is more brilliant in those years when sudden cool temperatures at night, which arrest the removal of the food substances, are followed by a succession of bright sunny days.

Pettiest of Thieves Plied Trade in Addison

In the old days it was thought that meanest kind of a thief was one who would steal pennies off a dead man's eyes. Now there seems to be a meaner kind of thief and, more shame to us, he or she has operated right in Addison.

Recently a family laid their beloved mother to rest in the Addison Cemetery, placing profuse floral offerings at the grave. Two or three days later a member of the family returned to the cemetery and was horrified to find that some callous vandal had stolen the very flowers off the mother's grave.

Words as keen as a two-edged sword, are too dull to describe the person who would stoop to such a low deed. Like the ghouls who rob graves of their bones, these vandals by their act even though they be unknown, have in their own mind placed themselves in a little corner of petty littleness too small to be inhabited by anything save themselves and the tiniest rodent.

Miss Darrin Speaks to Addison Advertising Club

Miss Katherine Darrin was the guest speaker at a special meeting of the Addison Advertising Club held last Friday evening in St. Catherine's hall. The event was ladies night, wives and lady friend's of the members being invited.

Miss Darrin talked on the important news events of the month, especially enlarging on the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. She traced the history of the events which led up to the passage of the Prohibition Law. Miss Darrin told of the abuses of the old saloon day with their "blue Mondays" and squandered pay envelopes that raised public sentiment against the liquor traffic. The speaker expressed the hope that return of legal liquor would not bring the saloon back.

Miss Darrin also spoke of the abolishment of the Lame Duck Congress, an institution which has been out of date for nearly a hundred years.

The speaker was introduced by Ray S. Brown, chairman of the entertainment comittee. The audience was led in singing Christmas carols by the Rev. Kenneth E. Arnold. The Rev J. V. Axtell gave the invocation and the Rev Ralph Webb pronounced the benediction.

There were 53 members and guests present. The dinner was served by the St. Catherine's daughters.

Elkland Men Arrested For Intoxication

William McCloskey of Elkland was arrested last Friday by Police Chief Elmer C. Bovee, charged with driving an antomobile while intoxicated. His companion, John Kolden, of Elkland, was also arrested charged with intoxication. At a hearing before Justice of the Peace D. J. Colbert, McCloskey pleaded guilty and was given a fine of $50 or six months in jail. Kolden was given a fine of $10 or thirty days in jail. Both fines were paid.

Autos Collide Near Gang Mills

Automobiles operated by Harold Bishop of Elkland, Pa., and Frank Little of Addison, collided Saturday on the state highway near Gang Mills.

Both cars were said to be headed toward Addison. Mr. Bishop stated that in driving through the dense fog which prevailed that evening, he was unable to see Mr. Little's machine ahead of him. As he applied the brakes his car skidded and collided with the car driven by Mr. Little. Both drivers escaped uninjured.

Mr. Clark has been postmaster at Bath for the past twelve years. Previous to 1921, he was engaged in the insurance business for a number of years.

Hornell Host To Legion Head

Edward Hayes, National Commander, Will Be Entertained in Hornell on February 2nd.

Steuben county legionnaires will be hosts to Edward Hayes of Decatur, Ill., national commander of the American Legion on Friday, February 2, 1934. Information to this effect was received by Commander Mark O'Neill of Cunningham Post, Hornell, several days ago.

The honor of entertaining the national commander was awarded to Steuben county because of the success in the membership campaign just closed. All except two of the ten posts in the county are well over the quotas which have been assigned to them. It is also said that the Steuben county organization ranks third among the counties of the state.

It is expected that between five and six hundred will be present at the reception to Commander Hayes which will be held in the Hotel Sherwood. A number of distinguished department officials, including Robert E. Minnick of Tupper Lake, department commander, and J. C. Stemper, department adjutant, are also expected.

Whiskered Troupe Trims Whitey's Five

Local Town Team, With Veterans Missing and Lacking Practice, Outclassed By Georgia House of David—Show Plenty of Fight, However.

Whitey's Service, as this season's Addison town team ensemble will go down on the records, essayed the hefty task of turning back the Georgia House of David as the lid was pried off the basketball cauldron in the Old High School gym last night. Whitey's cast had a storehouse of ambition and pep and carried the fight to the bitter end, but the bearded boys had the class and class prevailed — by a 49-32 count.

It should be mentioned that the Addison boys took the floor with a hastily assembled aggregation and without the benefit of even a single practice session before the zero hour of combat. Many stars of yesteryear, particularly Hewson, Hubbs and Coats from last year's line-up were missing. Shock troops rushed to the scene included Milt Crane, former high school star and present day luminary at Lafayette College; Jimmy Kelly and Russ Wade, local recruits of promise; and Zerfluh, the Westfield flash, who volunteered his bit in the common cause of repulsing the whiskered nomads.

The game with considerable zip, and early counters upon the part of Crane, D. Grange and J. Grange, inspired high hopes upon the part of the Addison fans, who had turned out in goodly numbers. Whitey's men tired noticeably as the fray progressed; even so, they were trailing by only four points as the half ended.

McMahon, elongated center, who is reported to have attained All-American Collegiate honors at Georgia Tech some three or four years ago, dropped through a beauty from the mid court to start the second stanza. D. Grange retaliated by exercising some slight of hand as he dropped one in from close range, after a quick pass from J. Grange who in a beautiful dribbling spurt had reconnoitered his way through the Georgia defense. Zerfluh added another, but Campbell did the same and McMahon again showed his stuff a moment later. Kelly arched in a beauty after a cross floor pass from D. Grange.

B. Walters broke into the scoring frenzy with one from the side. D. Grange niched one from the right. McMahon was accorded the privilege of two foul tries and made good on his second one. Zerfluh sank one from the left corner of the court —and then the invading forces unleashed their rapid-fire batteries. Walters, Campbell, Walters, McMahon and Campbell scored in the order named, to push the fuzzy-faced gentry into a sizeable lead.

An impromptu passing drill in which the touring basketeers revealed a few of the tricks and intracacies of the trade, ensued. At a high point in the exhibition it was difficult to determine whether the ball was actually in play, or perhaps enmeshed and secreted in whiskered seclusion. Whitey's boys made a valiant effort to break up the passwork parade, but their best efforts had long since been spent. Considering the fact that none were in condition to take the floor against strong opposition, least of all against a touring professional five, with anything more than a faint hope of victory, their performance was creditable indeed.

It is understood that regular practice sessions will start immediately which will put the boys in trim and round off the rough spots revealed in last night's contest. Then watch them go; that they have the making of a speedy aggregation no one can question. Captain Hewson, sadly missing last evening, will be back in the line-up for the next engagement.
